No. It doesn't. "Well regulated" had a different meaning when the Constitution was written: "Well-regulated in the 18th century tended to be something like well-organized, well-armed, well-disciplined," says Rakove. "It didn't mean 'regulation' in the sense that we use it now, in that it's not about the regulatory state. There's been nuance there. It means the militia was in an effective shape to fight."

32 We need to learn anti gestapo tactics if were going to beat them. Heres my contribution: a thug wearing a riot helmet has his awareness reduced, and when grappling one should grab said helmet and use it to control the combatant. An extremely effective tactic. Alternatively, ripping said helmet off exposes said thug to their own "non lethals". Hypothetically speaking in the coming minecraft game, of course

16 ▾ They realize it, but they also know pensions (and unions in general) are ponzi schemes and nobody in a ponzi scheme ever thinks they'll be the one holding the bag.

The clearest example of this I can give people of this union mentality is the UAW workers who work at GM plants. When the recession came in 2007 they were forced to take a low paying contract cause GM was going under. When things improved and it came time for a new contract in the mid 2010's, GM didn't want to pay them much. So what did the union do?

They secured large raises and bonuses for the senior UAW workers and set wages for junior and new hire union workers at $13/hour, barely above minimum wage. So the old heads got theirs at the expense of the young guys. Standard ponzi scheme stuff. But, the shocking part isn't that that happened. It's that the young guys almost all voted for the deal too.

19 The religious have been pushing the end times quite hard and not doing so responsibly either. Every time the world faces some form of adversity, people start ACTUALLY dooming and making connections to the biblical end times.

The world has lived as long as it has, some more adversity is not going to be the end times even if things seem hopeless. My cousin was tortured with that stuff as a kid and his anxiety this year is overwhelming for him.

26 I'm not a Christian, but I've studied scripture. The Bible says that no man shall know the hour of the day of the end times. It also says that Christians should live with hope and joy for the love of Christ within them. In no way does the Bible say that people should cower in fear. It certainly doesn't encourage anyone to "accelerate" the end times by starting a war with Iran or anyone else, but rather encourages Christians to love thy neighbor.

Our enemies totally exploit these religious ideas. I see it online and on TV every single day how people's fears and hopes about religion are exploited. You would think that decade after decade of seeing political events play out and Jesus doesn't arrive out of the clouds with flaming sword drawn, people would stop knee-jerking "It's the second coming!" but no ... The reason? They WANT the Apocalypse. They are so miserable or scared or dissatisfied with the evil crap on earth they want a world disaster and then to be rescued by a supernatural being. So it's mainly wishful thinking. Every religious group has prophecies that they try to assign to every world event, year after year, century after century. I'm not saying prophecies are all false. But It's tiring to watch this religious escapism and it keeps people from doing real practical and useful things to fix some of these problems. The Deep State exploits it, particularly with the endless wars for Israel's benefit. And don't think some of these TV preachers aren't PAID to spout the more political elements of their sermons. I bet many of them take a handsome sum $$$ to "preach" things that soften people up for more war or other government tactics that aren't good or necessary.

31 Mostly because Trump and those around him still seem very confident. He keeps saying we caught them and we can prove it. We all see the undeniable fraud already so we're inclined to believe it will turn out okay. Maybe it's all part of a plan or maybe it's normalcy bias and optimism.

I just hope that those with the power to bring this to a peaceful end realize what's going on. This isn't retarded russiagate nonsense or a bunch of whiny spoiled college kids angry that they don't get universal basic income. This is a HUGE percentage of the population who sees the life they love disappearing. It's not just about who is President. The alternative isn't just another useless idiot for 4 years, it's not just more wasted money, or even stupid things like Obamacare. This is about everything core to this country. It's about the first amendment, the second amendment, and the whole concept of our republic.

You lock people down and you're going to get problems. It already escalated problems on the left with BLM and Antifa - kids who feel helpless with nothing to do. If you hit that point with people on the right you face a much larger problem. It's going to be really hard to de-escalate from here without effectively having a revolution. The only way I see it happening is a decisive Trump victory.

Hope for the best but I recommend everyone prepare for anything.

Supreme Court missed an opportunity to prevent violence and destruction.
Hopefully events like this wake them up before bullets really do start flying.
Cops will have the worst job ever if they continue this nonsense. I've always been cop neutral... went to be a cop supporter 6 months back... boy was I wrong.

This 🙌

The protest on the 6th in DC will be the test. Will this happen peacefully, with Trump winning and the left bowing out, or will their coup move forward come hell or high water.

If it's the former, we can all collectively exhale and it'll be high fives and cheers all around.

If it's the latter.....then I think shit is going to get real serious real quick.

Agreed. I don't think some people appreciate JUST how all-in and masks-off the leftists are this year.

This election will be what chicoms (and really the rest of the world) will teach school students in near-future world history classes as being the exact year/event that caused the former United States of America to crumble into dust as ancient Rome did.

If the former they won't let us relax. This is a long-term cold/lukewarm war. If Trump wins on the 6th we'll still have two awful years of Congress in enemy hands and no end in sight to election fraud and no senate confirmation of loyalists to any posts. Trump will have to make it work with even less than he had in his first term. He'll have to suppress the election fraud somehow, and that will require violating court orders because the courts will be absolutely on the other side. They will amp up attempts to assassinate him. He'll need our prayers and help continuously.

This is what these fucks should really be afraid of. Unless they plan on hiding inside government buildings forever they will end up in positions where they can be dealt with. 24/7 police protection at the home doesn't work very well when you know how idiotic and easy to deal with most police really are when the perpetrator is intent on causing grievous harm.

I'm a Trump supporter, does that count?" Then they went on to ask if I had access to explosives or chemical weapons precursors since I am employed in the chemical industry. I told them no, we have strict inventory controls, you can't just walk off site with stuff like that. Eventually they got bored and left after I failed to offer any useful information.

▼ Chanting is an expression of aggression and a prelude to more permanent actions. If it wasn't effective, it wouldn't have been present through many cultures over many years. It's still present in the modern military but has also found form in militaristic music.

To be fair, it's a bit late in the game and we could have done with it outside of voting centers while observers were being obstructed from doing their job but some of these politicians could still do with having the wind put up them.

- Don't give up. It can't get better if you're dead, and you can't help in any group efforts.
- Do not hurt innocent people under any circumstances. Vet all decisions.
- Consider joining local proud boys, working out in your house/on your lawn, or going door-to-door looking for people to join an exercise group. Push-ups, sit-ups, curls, jumping jacks, sprinting, jogging, until you can't think straight from tiredness. Physical exercise works as an outlet for pent-up frustration.

You don't necessarily even need to show up to do violence.

If the point is to attend the meeting, keep walking into the meeting. If you meet resistance, keep packing in a calmly walking forward. You don't have to be a dick or curse anyone out. Just say, "We are going to walk into that meeting. You're either going to have get someone out her to explain why I'm doing something unlawful, let me keep walking, or take me down with force. 💎?"

At the very least, stand your ground. Have a sit in. Don't just walk out because they said, "Nope, can't come in 💎?".

And FFS leave your dogs at home or, at the very least, the dog and kid people stay on the perimeter.

Americans have been conditioned over the past decades to believe that if the women and children are in front, they won't be attacked, because that's how we've seen our military forced to act when the middle eastern countries pulled the "human shield" stunt.

Woman are the worst at these kinds of events. Even at street corner rallies. They constantly put themselves in danger because they feel so safe. But they won't feel safe, and will be an easy target WHEN things finally go bad.

The best thing is that it's far worse when it comes to antifa. They seem to be almost solely fronted by women. And those woman are just as foolishly aggressive, with no ability to back it up physically.

6 So women need to have arms pointed at the enemy. And when the enemy shoots the women and they fall apart and the men start losing focus because they don't want to see women get hurt, and the whole thing goes down the tubes. Be sure to pat yourself on the back for being such a simp and making excuses for those "way super bad ass ruthless women" King simp.

women are a liability. Men cannot focus on the task at hand if they are busy worried that women are not safe. It is a very basic response that men have on a physiological level and it's the reason women should not be allowed to be on the front lines. And if you disagree with me, then I think you haven't realized just how seriously you need to be taking this. If you are still okay with it then you are just engaging in a self-satisfying larp. You don't let women fight on the front lines in combat with men. Period.

People here also do not believe a man should follow orders if those orders are illegal. We want to believe that police officers will enforce the law orders. That's why they're called law enforcement officers.

The term "law and order" takes the word order to mean isentropic as opposed to commanded. We want to prevent disorder with the laws created by our representatives. approved of by our leader. and clarified

I see. The more I think about it, the issue might come across this way to some:

-BLM and ANTIFA protests turn violent quite often, ours don't. -BLM and ANTIFA have been taught to protest police, we haven't. -BLM and ANTIFA demand cutting the resources for the police, we seen no value in that decision. -BLM and ANTIFA have voted for democrats who cheated their way into office AND pandered to the above demands.

The police are protecting the very people (by just following orders) from the peaceful victims of fraud, and they're doing it with the very gear that the people they protect have promised to take away. The frustration comes from that quagmire. We need them to step aside so we can fight FOR them. Once they take the tyrants side they're not worth fighting for, and we are happy to resist them when the time comes. When BLM and ANTIFA show up to places they shouldn't be (like businesses with large glass windows) the police don't stop them from entering or exiting (or burning), but they don't mind showing up to stop us. They KNEEL to the left. We find it pathetic.

If violence broke out I think our guys are well trained and equipped to protect ourselves quickly and efficiently. We all know that when seconds matter police are only minutes away. Having the police closer only helps if they have the mentality of enforcing law, not acting like Pablo's security team. Those cops weren't there to prevent violence between the left and the right, they represent a heavily armed left and faced an unarmed right. That isn't violence prevention.

As far as burning bridges, yeah, I don't like to go to the extremes like some people here and on the left do. Emotion amplifies some of our reactions. I try not to make decisions and statements in states of high emotion. I like to point out the specific action as bad, but not paint with broad brush strokes if I can avoid it.

I don't know if that clears anything up. It turned into a rant.

2 There are advantages and disadvantages there.

Advantage: we create a situation where the cops may not know if they are up against Antifa (their own). or patriots.

Disadvantage: We'll find out very quickly that most of Antifa is paid for as they stop protesting.

I believe the whole game here is "replacement".

They want us chanting the same chants (already happening), and wearing the same clothing.

That way when the government starts slaughtering patriots openly in the street at these protests. the
